THE NEWBERRY LIBRARY UNDERGRADUATE SEMINAR
SPRING 2019

Modern Literature and Art in Chicago: 1900-1960

The Newberry Library Undergraduate Seminar is a team-taught interdisciplinary course that is open to undergraduates from four Chicago-area universities (DePaul, Loyola, UIC, and Roosevelt). Its goal is to enable participating students to take part in an intensive classroom experience that will culminate in the preparation of an independent research project. This project will draw on the Newberry Library's unparalleled collections on the history and culture of early modern Europe. Students in the program are assigned individual study areas at the Newberry and are encouraged to work closely with the Newberry staff. The spring 2019 seminar is Modern Literature and Art in Chicago (1900-1960) and will be co-taught by Professors Melissa Bradshaw (Loyola University) and Mark Pohlad (DePaul University). Please consult the Newberry Library brochure for more details about the subject of the course.

The seminar will meet at the Newberry Library from 2:00-5:00 pm on Tuesdays and Thursdays during the spring semester of 2019 (January 15 through May 2). It will carry six hours of credit toward LAS credit requirements, or perhaps a major. Any junior or senior at UIC is eligible to apply; admission is not restricted by major. Students who seek credit for their major should make arrangements with their director of undergraduate studies. Each student who is accepted into the course will receive a $1250.00 scholarship from LAS to cover expenses related to research and transportation. (Please note the recent change in stipend levels to remain consistent with LAS Undergraduate Research Initiative (LASURI) stipends.)

If you are interested in taking this seminar, please complete the application below and submit the application and all related materials electronically to Professor Ellen McClure (ellenmc@uic.edu) by October 26, 2018. Successful candidates will be notified by November 5. Admission is competitive, so it is important that you complete this application form completely and with care.

If you have questions, or would like additional information, please feel free to contact Professor McClure, who is the UIC contact for the seminar.
